Then when do you think the right moment will come?

(The cape flutters in the night wind) This... No one knows, but I'll always be ready!

You're being too mysterious. Can't you tell me at least a little?

(Turning to leave) Sorry, I can't reveal more. My mission has just begun...

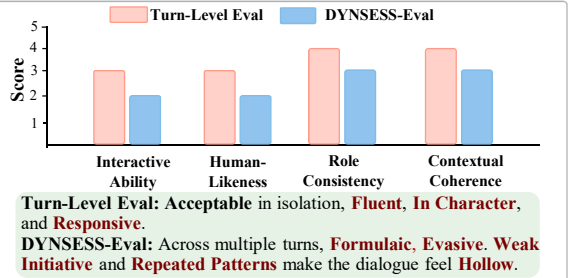

All right... then can you tell me about one of your past battles with him?

(Stop and look back at you) There were many battles, but they are in the past. I have to focus on the present and the future.

Formulaic & Passive

User Persona: The user is an ordinary person. Curious about Gotham’s urban legends and superheroes, straightforward in tone.....
Dialogue History: T1 – T20 The user keeps asking why Batman does not kill the Joker. Batman replies that killing would make him no different from the Joker and deepen Gotham’s darkness, and says he is waiting for the right moment to act...

Then when do you think the right moment will come?

(Silence for a moment, low voice) When his madness is exposed to all the criminals...- that's the moment.

I see... Then what do you think he is doing right now?

He is now probably planning a "perfect chaos", usually in...Are you interested in "The Clown's Playground" with your eyes?

Really? Of course I want to! Then when do we leave?

(Glancing at you in a cold tone) Don't get too excited. Wait until I confirm that it's not a trap. The cape will be faster than you think
